Type of session	Symposium

Description	The sanatorium movement was largely disbanded with the advent of effective TB treatment and ambulatory care. The need for long-stay therapeutic accommodation has re-emerged at the nexus of clinical and social complexity, reflecting the changing epidemiology of TB internationally among largely urban and excluded populations. This symposium will provide an overview of the sanatorium movement and encourage debate about its contemporary relevance using international examples of long-stay accommodation facilities for TB patients and alternative models of care.
